BRITISH AMERICA. - The successful establishment of a confederation of all the provinces of British America, the New York Tribune says, would be an event of so great importance for the entire American continent that the progress of the scheme well deserves to be attentively take note of the utificial account of the late Conference of Charlottetown, which has recently appeared in the papers of the British American

The Convention was attended by all the leading men of the British Provinces; and, as we are assured by the official account, that every memher of the Conference "subscribed heartily to the conclusion arrived at by the Conference that a federation of all the Provinces would be highly advantageous." We may regard the scheme as having at present a good prospect of being consummated.

Nothing definite as to the details of the scheme was agreed upon by the Conference, but every point has been left open to discussion by a second Conference, which is to meet at Chebee Ir the course of the present month. It appears to have been the meaning of the Charlottetown Conference that the Confederation may consist for the present of three sections, namely: Upper Canada, Lower Canada, and the Maritime Prov-Inces (New Brnnswick, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, and Prince Edward's Island), but that provision may also be made for the admission into the union hereafter, on equitable terms, of the Northwest territory, British Columbia, and Vauconver's Island. The whole country may have our name-say Canada or Acadia.

Each of the Provinces would, of course, have a local Legislature and Executive, charged with the control of all local matters. It seems to have been generally agreed upon in regard to the constitution of the Federal Legislature, that the representation in the lower house must be based on population, and that of the upper ence of views as to the election of the members of the upper house. Some favor election for a term of years by the people (as in Belgium); others prefer to have their election vested in the local Legislature (as in the United States); while others, again, advocate their appointment for life by the Crown (as hi France).

The Federal Government would be consti tuted as now, the representative of the Crown being advised by an administration possessing the confidence of Parliament. To the Federal authority thas constituted would obviously be committed all questions of trade, navigation ourrency, banking, general taxalion, bankruptey, and criminal law. It would have control of the militia and defense of the country, coinage, weights, and measures, light-houses, aca-fisheries, letters patent and copyright, naturalization, census, postal service, immigra-Hon, inter-colonlal works. &c.

The press of all the provinces, with the exception of a part of the French press of Lower Canada, continue to regard the plan with great favor. They feel flattered by the prospect of becoming one of the great nations of the earth. success of the Confederation will gradually loosen the ties which have hitherto connected them with England, and they are therefore eagerly canvassing the question whether they will ultimately form a monarchy or a republic. The monarchical party has, at present, undoubtedly an overwhelming majority in the provinces, and, as an intermediate state, they ask for the appointment by the Euglish Crown of a vicerov.

However this question may in future be solved, the prospects of the organization of a new American State of vast territorial dimensions are such as to promise success. Whenever this new State-whether it be a monarchy or a republic-shall sever its councetlon with England, the emancipation of American territory from European rule will be nearly completed. The following table, exhibiting on the one hand the American States under American governments, and on the other the American territories still subject to European rule, will show the great change which a transfer of British North America from European to American rule would produce in the mutual relations be tween Europe and America:

United States .... ombia (New Grenada) tral America

ter the establishment of the independence of British America, would remain connected with Europe, would consist of islands. The Continent would become almost wholly independent Sorretures for the Science A Paris letter in the London Star says: "Several of the first artists in Paris are busily employed in sculpturing a splendid collection of beasts, destined to be placed in the gardens of the Harem at Constantinople. Twenty-two animals are already completed-erocodiles, porcupiues, tigers, and their neighborhood. According to the laws of the Koran the Sultan is not allowed to have the statues of any descendants of Adam; he will, at d marble certainly anrivalled in Enrope."

Cir On Wednesday last the Federal troops entered Centralia, Mo., and, under the excitem nt of the occasion, burned all the houses in the place. On the day following they burned the residence of Mr. Thomas Sneed. The number of dead bodies found and brought to Centralia, we learn, is eighty-seven.

THE FIGHT BETWEEN MACK AND CORCEN.

The Fight Between Mack and Corcin.—
The forthcoming great international battle between Mace and Coburn, the Anglo-American pugilist, is beginning, writes the London correspondent of a Dublin paper, to excite almost as much interest in the sporting world as that between Tom Savers and Heenan, or the more recent combat between the latter and Tom King. Coburn is, you know, descended of Irish parents, who, many years since, emigrated to America. He is represented as having the great litting power of Heenan, but with greater solidity and more judgment. His opponent, who is the most accomplished living athlete, now now that Tom Savers has retired into private now that Tom Savers has retired into private life (to keep a public house) defeated King, who, in his turn, beat Heenan. Ile Is, however, much lighter than Coburn, Ile is, however, much lighter than Coburn, being under twelve stone (eleven stone ten pounds); but to compensate for weight he has amazing muscular development, and a knack of "getting away," as it is termed, from an adversary, which in many instances, has done him good service. The contest is fixed for the first week in October, but the rumor that it may probably come off in Ireland is, I believe, without foundation. Coburn has not yet arrived, but his money (five hundred pounds) will all be staked by the 27th last, after which the final preparation for the contest will be made. Meantime the betting is decidedly in favor of Mace, whose performances in the ring are matters of history, while those of Coburn can only be gathered from report. His backers here, however, say he is a splendid fellow, and in every way worthy of the confidence which his admireshave placed in him. He is expected to arrive in the course of the ensulng week.

MCCLELLANISM IN FRANKFORT. McClellanism In Frankfort.

Frankfort, Oct. 10, 1864.

Charles, whose surmaine is Eginton, the Lin coin elector for this district, must be devoted; pitached to the capital. He addressed the people here again this evening, this being the third appointment he has made and filled for this place. Why does he his in haranguing us so ofter with his radical heresles? The only reasonable solution of the question is, that he considers this a McClellan stronghold, and is bringing his "popgum" artillery to bear upon h, with the hope of its surrendering to his master, Lincoln. Anothat Inlinitesimal "rush-light" (as you pertinent by term it), which flickers in our cit with a dull, siekly blaze, the Commonwealth, is everting its puny efforts to play the part of the "wooden horse" of Trojar notoriety. But they night as well attempt to play the part of the 'wooden horse' of Troja notoriety. But they might as well attempt the strike the pyramids from their bases with tacklammers as to shake the unfaltering attachment of our good citizens to our chosen leader, Gebandel and the speech this evening. We were not able the present during his first harangne, but entered the Court-house when General John Mallarian, that gattan chapming of conservations. Hartan, that goffant champion of conservation and McCellan, was in the midst of an annuli latting, crushing reply. Mr. Eginton, who is as feed of addressing the citizens of Frankfort was most effectually "used up" and done awa with. General H. used his conservative logics a sledge-hannuer, and the effect on Mr. E was seen in the defighted countenances of the crowd, who greeted almost every sentence with centering applicance.

During the General's speech he told, with haracteristic power and pertinence, how, when have Kentuckians were buttling at the front for characteristic power and pertinence, how, when brave Kentuckians were buttling at the front for the suppression of the rebellion and the suppremacy of the constitution and the government, the men from over the river who are now advocating the re-election of Mr. Lincoln were here at their homes stealing their negroes. He looked into his audience and asked, "is that eight?" One poor, pitiful specimen of humanity, who never had the means to buy one-fourth of a negro said, "it is." The look the General gave him was enough to make him tremble from the top to the bottom of his little excuse for a body. What a commentary on the great "To-whom it may concern" party.

Gen. Harlan chained the attention of the assembly for an hour and three quarters by a bold, manly defence of the Union Democracy and their candidates from the contemptible slanders which have been heaped upon them by abolition hereties. His enlogy upon the galfant young chieftain, whom the people in November will select to supersede the present occupant of the Presidential chair, was full of burning, patriotle ologenence. When he had concluded, the Lacoln elector, who so loves to speak to the Frankfort people, rose to rejdy(2). Mr. E. is a thin, wiry little man, with an ominously dark camplexion, and looks as if he might he related to that political nonenty yetept Hamlin, who has been beard of just once since November, 1-80, and that was when be was elected Vlee-Ptesdent. He asked the attention of the lew who remained (the majority of the crowd left the house when General Harlan concluded his remarks) for fifteen minues. He then commenced what he and six other men in the house (we saw only siz who applanded or seemed pleased with what he said—the others remained through curiosity) applauded or seemed pleased with what he said other men in the house (we saw only six who applianded or seemed pleased with what he said—the others remained through enriosity) thought a reply to the able address of General II. His "pop-gims" were at lirst low and rather indistinct; but soon they swelled into a din and clatter that a Highland regiment with hag-pipes could not surpass. And the fuss he made was all. However, the six worthies aforesaid seemed immensely pleased, and langhed and droos their canes into the theory with a vim. He closed, and the undience dispersed, with the firm, unalterable conviction that George B. McClellan should be and would be the next President of the United States, save and except the immortal six.

In a private conversation, not long since, we heard Governor Bramlette say that "we had concluded for the condition, and now the second George—our gallant McClellan—had come forward to be his Country, and now the second George—our gallant McClellan—had come forward to be his Country, Savior." Were bis words not prophetic? Let us make them so. God speed you, Messis, Edutors, in your noble work. You desire and have the plandits of the lovers of constitutional liberty, and, as General Halleck wrote to General McClellan, little dreaming he wrote the wurds of prophecy—"A grateful country, while it mourns the dead, cannot forget the honors doe the living." LETTER FROM JUDGE DUVALL.

Thes. V. Lindsey, Esq.:

Georgittown, Kv., Oct. 5, 1861.

DEAR SIR: During my absence from the State, iffa, directing them to have my main stricker from the polls as a candidate. The effect of that order, and of its exention by the officers, was, as I then believed and still believe, to defeat the will of an overwhelming majority of the voters of the districts, and to proven them from exercising the most valuable right secured. the voters of the districts, and to provent them from exercising the most valuable right secured to them by their constitution and laws.

But, whatever may be our estimate of this wrong, or of the policy of silent acquiescence in it, think you will, upon a more thorough examination, concur with me in the opinion that our laws have provided no remedy for it. The statistic creating the Board for determining contested elections limits the jurisdiction of the board to three classes of cases: First, where two candidates shall have received an equal number of votes; second, where the person retwo candidates shall have received an equal number of votes; second, where the person returned is found not to have been legally qualified; and, third, where another than the person returned shall be found to have received the highest number of loyal votes. Although the constitution expressly declares that all elections shall be five and equal, and that the privilege of free suffrage shall be supported by lawaregulating elections, and prolibiting, under adequate penaltics, all undue influence thereou from power, bribery, thunk, or other improper practices, still, the powers of the Board are so clearly defined and limited by the express terms of the statute that I do not see how they could Gereral McClellan went on board the gun-bont Galena about two o'clock in the afternoon, and had a consultation with Commodore Rodg-es, and returned to the shore in about two nears. Immediately on landing, he mounted its bore and rode to the front. He continued iding along the lines the enthre afternoon and and during the night, directing the movements of troops to and from Haxall's Landing and Mat-gen Hill. During the night he also, in person, of troops to and from Haxall's Landing and Matvern Hill. During the night he also, in person, directed the movements of the immense wagon train to Harrison's Landing. It should be remunisered that the fighting at Malvern Hill was territic after Gen. MoClellan had left the Galena Commodore Rodgers having been directed where to throw his shells. At that time, a column of 28,000 rebels were coming down the river road to reinforce the enemy, and it was the liring by the Galena, as directed by General McClellan, which checked their advance. So much for the gunboat story.

Andrew Johnson, Mr. Lincoln's companion on Andrew Johnson, Mr. Lincoln's companion on the abolition ticket, made a speech in the Senate in the winter of 1860-61, in which he said; "I want to retain and maintain my place here, and put down Mr. Lincoln and then added, "in four years from this time Lincoln and his Administration will be turned out, the most defeated and broken down party that ever come into power." The prophecy is doubtless a true one, but the project has sold his chance of sharing the honors of its fulfilment for a mess of Administration pottage, and the contempt and hatred of his fellow-citizens in the State of his nativity.

Not a few of the worst disorders that affiliat mankind arise from the corruption that accumulates in the blood. Of eil the discoveries that have been mada to purge il ont, none can equal in affect Helm-hold's Compound Extract of Sarsaperilla. It eleanses and renovates the blood, instils the vigor of health into the system, and purgos out the humora which make disease. It stimulates the healthy functions of the hody and dispels the disorders that grow and rankfe in the b'ood. Its autraordinary virtues are nat t widaly known, but when they are, it will no longer be a question what remedy to employ in the grea variety of afflioting diseases that require an alterative remedy. Such a remedy, that could be relied on, has long been sought for, and now, for the first time, the public have one on which they can depend. Our space here does not admit certificates to show its affect, but the trial of a single bottle will show to tha sick that it has virtues surpassing anything they have avertaken. of eod2w Diseases of the Nervous, Seminal, y, Urinar and Sexual Systems. (For the Louisville Sunday Journal.) HYPNOTIC HAPPINESS. BY MES. LUCY WRIGHT. Count o'er the Joys thine hours have see a Count o'er thy days from anguish free, And know, what ver thon has been, "Tis something better not to be,

The object of life is the pursuit of happiness. But what is happiness, and how is it to be obtained? The Arab has his hasehisch, the Chines his opium, the South American his eocoo lenf, and the Indian, not alone, his tobacco. We free Americans, of cosmopolitan descent, soloce ourselves with the spirit of corn and the fulce and smoke of tobacco-poor substitutes for the dreamy happiness of opium, or the gorgeons fantasia of Iudian hemp. If there be a nepenthe, we, of all natious of earth, upon this, the present bank and shoul of time, stand most in need of it. The poor drafted and the drafted poor should be bountlfully supplied with a most potent care and scare-dispeller. He who shall discover that which will make a Mr. or Mrs. Mark Tapley of every man and woman of this war-distracted country will deserve more of humanity than a Sanitary Commission. To be jully, or not to be jelly, that is the question.

Let us consider, scriatim, the various agents that have been had recourse to as a means of lightening the ills that flesh is heir to or mind inherits, and of mitigating the malign influences that make calamity of so long life,

Of physical agents, that of Mesmerlsin has proprised much, but alas, has performed but little. " It is among the most enrious of the numerous facts which Mr. Baird's investigation upon artificial somnambulism (Mesnicrism) have brought to light, that the suggestions derived from the "muscular sense" have a peeuliar potency in determining the current of thought. For if the face, body, or limbs be brought into an attitude that is expressive of any particular emotion, or that correspond with that in which it would be placed for the performance of any voluntary action, the corresponding mental state-that is, either an emotional condition affecting the general direction of the thoughts, or the idea of a particular action-is called up in consequence of it." Under the influence of this hypnotism, as it is sometimes ealled, if the hand of the operator is placed npon the head of his subject, and that part of his anatomy slightly thrown back, we are assured that as much pride is displayed as is ever manifested by a successful candidate for Congress. Here is happiness and pride at the small est possible cost. Again, humility can be produced, even in the most pompous and arrogant offlee-holder. In this state, by thrusting the head forward and downward. So, again, laughter and a hilarious disposition are readily induced by gently separating the angles of the month, and by contracting the eye-brows, and drawing them toward the nose, a moroseness is induced equal that which is observed in an individual bunch of keys, and placing the hand in the pocket, the traditional idea of silver is suggested to the sleeping Hypnot. Thus it will be observed] that much happiness of a purely visionary character can be obtained by a very inconsiderable amount of physical exertion. which has the great merit of not being succeeded by unpleasant after effects. This is about all

Ponderable hypnotic happiness is a much more extensive subject, and one that has been | Tune lightens up the touching madness of largely discussed. Perhaps the most ancient is Ophelia, and it is scareely possible to conceive that which is the product of the fermentation of anything more touching than the description of the jnice of the grape. Noah having heen sur- her death in the stream: rounded by water for a considerable number of days and nights, reversed the fluld order of things by himself surrounding a liquid of much less specific gravity than the one upon which he had just concluded his voyage in search of "port." Since that memorable period a little happluess and infinite misery have resulted from the thousand modifications which the is mentioned in the Tuming of the Shrew: original jnice has suffered from the ingenuity of man in transforming a healthful, care-dispelling fluid hato the flery llquid which consum health, body, and soul; and for the moment o premonitory happiness with which it deludes its victim, demands his eternal misery as a com-

The key to the mystery of the great sueces which crowned the efforts of Mahomet is to be sought in the fact that the use of alcoholic llquors, of whatever source or origin, were strictly interdicted as a means of exhibitration to the followers of the prophet. Who ever heard of an Intoxicated individual who experienced religion or adopted a new ereed? Christlanity is the only religion that has ever withstood the alcoholic ordeal. The transient happinesss which it produces is succeeded by such abject misery that hope itself is abandoued, and the wretched inebriate holds himself amenable to neither the laws of God nor man. The consumer of alcohol is prepared to dispute everything, and deny everything but the Diviue origin of the Christian religion. The spirit of disbelief, rebellion, and wine, constitute the trinity of discord. The hypnotic happiness of alcohol is of such an evanescent character, and the subsequent misery of such infinite depth, that it becomes a question of much interest to the psychologist why that kind of anaesthesia is ever had recourse to a second time by the same individual. Of all body and soul-destroying nareotic stimulants, alcohol is the most speedy and fatal In its effects, when used to excess. Dr. Oppenheim assures us, in his book of travels, that those persons who use opium to exerss do not accomplish the ruin of their health, or a serious impairment of their intel

The subject is worn to the last degree of atten-Of all stimulants, that of hasehisch is possessed of most psychological interest. Although pleasurable excitement generally follows the ingestion of this resin, yet oceasioually directly opposite results obtain. Thus there are Instances in which furious insanity manifests itself after the use of this agent, together with a disposition un the Part of the "haschischan" to take the life of his fellow man. Hence the term assussin, which is a corruption of the Arable, haschischan. Among the eurious effects of hemp is that of extending our Impressions of time and space. Minntes become hours, hours lengthen into years; and a vista of limited extent is expanded into lufinite space. Impressions crowd through the brain in much the same manner that is observed by a person in the act of drowning. At such a time, it is said that a panoramic view of every act of our lives passes through the mind in a second of time. A furlough of a few days might thins, by the aid of hasehiseh, be prolonged to several years; and the space between contending armies extended beyond the range of a two hundred pound shot. By the proper use of this miraculous agent our soldiers can always be kept at a safe distance from the rebels (in the mind's eye). Again, a duality of mind ls developed by swallowing a dose of haschisch. ed musical knowledge, and the practical attain Thus, a person during the fantasia of hemp has been known to compose in French and express | compared with Shakespeare. This is the more himself in Italian at the same instant of time. This fact will be of immense advantage to politicians who preach one line of policy and practise another. Much more might be said on this very foreign to the great mass of the public, or subject in its applications to the present state of the country, but a a word to the wise, etc.

SHARISH ARE IN THIS RELATION TO MUSIC.-From a lecture delivered on the 23d of April, 1864, before the "Berliner Tonknenstler Verein," by Emil Naumann, we take the following: Fallow: "The ease of a treble hantboy was a mansion for him, a court." (Here we have a glimpse of Shakespeare's possessing a particular knowledge of separate instruments). Ou another occaslou, Falstaff says: "Sblood, I am as melan-Hen .- Or an old lion; or a lover's lute. Fuls .- a General. Yea, or the droue of a Liucolnshire bagpipe." This is a proof that Shakespeare dld not entertain less repugnance than any of us for the musle played at fairs or ground upon organs, and of which I, at least, feel such a horror. Song and music play a wonderfully spirited part in that seene of Twelfth Night where Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and the Clown, In their enps, the night-owl iu a eatch that will draw three souls out of one weaver? Music plays an exceedingly important part in Symbeline. The lontish Clolen says to the Mulelans who are about to serenade the fair Imagine: "Come on, tune: if you can penetrate ier with your fingering, so; ' First a very excellent concerted thing; after a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to t, and then let her consider." This is followed iron heart and a soft hand.

Hark! hark! the lark at Heaven's entering which Franz Schubert set to music. Cloter then continues: "So, get you gone; if this penetrate. I will consider your musle the better : If It do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse halrs and cat-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend." Fidele death is announced by solemn music from the eave of Belarius. Subsequently, the two royal yonths propose to sing a requiem for the beautiful departed one.

The spirits that appear to Posthiumis are nneed with "Selemn Music," and take part in a song. In Lear, Cordella has her father awakened-after she has found him again -with gentle sounds, because the Physician has so ordered, in order to Cure this great breach in his abased nature and to "wlud up" "the untuned and jarred seuses." In Othello, Desdemona brealles fortl her auxious presentiments in the "Song of the Willow," which her mother's mald sang when her lover left her.

An old thing 'Iwas, but it expressed her fortune, And she died singing it: that song, to-night, Will not go from my mind.

In Macbeth, the three seemes of the witches are accompanied with singing and dancing. The elght kings, who pass in the vision before Mac heth, are made by Shakespeare to appear to the sound of "Hautboys," By this, he evidently wishes to imply that all he desires is the soft and spiritual sound of wooden wind lustruments. It is, by the way, very remarkable how Shakespeare who is in search of a substitute. Is it not strange that sheep's guts should hale souls out of men's bodies! Well, a horn for any money, when all's done." And when the fool has sung, and been overwhelmed with praise by the others, Benedick suddenly exclaims, as we ourselves should sometimes like to do in the society of light soil to be several inches deeper in the amaleurs: "An he had been a dog that should bave howled thus, they would have hanged him!" Lastly, I cannot suppress something Shakes leare says about us musicians, though it is not over-flattering, for it proves, at any rate, that the great poet knew people like ns. In the first part of Henry IV., Hotspur, wishing to excus the fickle and changeable Glendower, says to his wife:

Alas! what a place this would be if the many olored ereeds of this world did not, by Almighty goodness, make the white light of the world to THE BANKING UP OF TREES. - A writer in actions of state, on the contrary, for processions, joins the root, was snuk beneath the soil, death was cure to follow. This supposed scientific fact has been repeated by various writers, and was long received nudonbtedly by readers. In altering the surface of the ground on the Beacon street Mall some years since care was taken to leave deep hollows round the tranks of the elms, in order that their necks might not undergo the suffication of interment; and it was then supposed to be essential, that such should be taken, even if the surface were raised only a few inches. In short, a well educated cultivator tweny years ago would no sooner have covered up the neck of a tree than a wel educated physician of the last century won'd have given a fever patient fresb air or cold.wa-'er. Fortnuately for sick men and for trees, is well as for the advance of science, sympathizing attendants did experiment, on the sly, with coid water and open windows; and ignorant farmers did obstinately set out trees without regard to their recks, sometimes in order to cover up an ugly part of the trank, or sometimes, perhaps, in mero bravado of received doctrines: for there is a class of men who love to do things because they are said not to be rich!; and the tree grew as well, or better, than those set ln the nanai way. It has now become a pretty well established fact among our farmers that fruit trees enceeed better when planted in a new place than they stood in the nursery. Four or five years ago our attention was cerecially drawn to this subject by the laying ont of a fine estate belonging to one of onr summer neighbors, where, in order to bring the lawn into graceful nudulation, it was needful to alter the ground by raising the sniface in several places occupied by jarge elms and other species of forest trees. It was with no small consternation that we looked on from day to day as the work proceeded. We even ventured a mild remonstrance with he proprietor; but this was of no avail, as he put implicit faith in his gardener and his gardener put as implicit faith in bimself. The trunk of one good sized clm, which grew in an nneightly hollow, was buried eleven feet, and others at various lesser depths. We waited the resnit with much solicitude, for these trees had been onr familiar friends from childhood; and we ate, perhaps, a little heathenish in our love for the inanima'e things of earth. The firstenmmer passed with no perceptible change. The second summer the foliage seemed fiver than sual, and the third it was manifest that the only alteration in any of them was for the better, while the one which was buried eleven feet, and which had never been a healthy tree tefore, now put on quite a jocund and robust appearance. Last spring another of our neighbors, in raising an embankment round his honse, turied a cherry tree to the dep h of three feet. This tree bore an abundant crop of fruit, while every other tree in the village bore nothing. It would seem ressenable that a tree should he planted by rainre in the best possible way. and it was probably respect for the ways of nature that induced the belief among the early botablets that a tree taken up from one place and planted in another should be set as nearly as possible at the same depth as that But this must suffice. We should fill a book | in which it grew at first. It is hardly possible the theory could have been tounded on experiment, nuless European trees held their vitality on principles different from those of America. This is a very important subject and the writer is anxions to learn what has been the result of the experience and observation of other persons. If thoughtful and intelligent arbor enitmists will send him such results, be will endeavor to draw attention to the
